What's New in the Photoshop Elements Download 2022?

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for controlling the operation of a compressed air supply in an internal combustion engine. 2. Description of the Prior Art It is known in the prior art to provide an internal combustion engine with a compressed air tank which is used to exhaust some of the air through an exhaust system. Typically, the compressed air which has been supplied to the engine is used to operate the fuel injectors in the engine. The compressed air tank is, in some applications, pressurized by a compressor for the sole purpose of supplying the compressed air to the engine. In other applications, the compressed air tank is used to assist in supplying air to the engine. Various examples of these compressed air tanks are found in the prior art. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,408,670 to Parr et al describes a compressed air tank which is used to control the air fuel ratio to the engine to achieve maximum power. U.S. Pat. No. 4,692,348 to Will describes a system for measuring and controlling the air/fuel ratio of an engine by introducing air into the intake manifold to control the position of a poppet valve in a two-cycle engine. U.S. Pat. No. 4,721,278 to Eggers et al teaches a fuel injection system which uses a compressed air tank to pressurize the air which is delivered to the engine. U.S. Pat. No. 4,761,092 to Haneda et al describes an air fuel ratio control system for an internal combustion engine which uses the air from an air tank to control the air fuel ratio of the air fuel mixture to the engine. In both of these examples, the air tank is pressurized by a pump which is driven by the engine. Further, the prior art includes a second compressed air tank which is used to purge the air from the engine. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,575,577 to Peterson et al describes a system in which the compressed air tank is used to purge the combustion chambers of a crankcase compression internal combustion engine to prevent the engine from becoming flooded when the air compressor is not operating. U.S. Pat. No. 4,822,044 to van den Bosch et al describes a system for controlling the engine speed in a turbocharger in an internal combustion engine. This system relies on the air supply from a tank to be used to
